

Determination you can Bank on

Anil Chandy

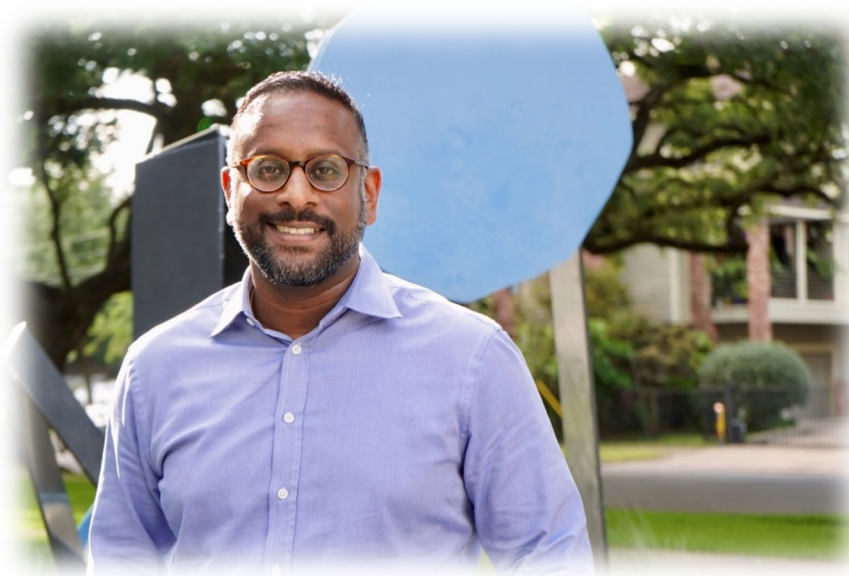

Senior Vice President - Corporate & Institutional Banking, PNC Financial Services

Graduated University of St. Thomas, Class 2000

MBA Texas A&M 2004

No strangers to hard work, his parents arrived from Kerala just off the southwestern Malabar Coast of India in 1975 to the United States with the foresight of a better future for their growing family. Anil born in Houston, Texas after his mother finished her nursing degree and his father enrolled and completed a two-year technical school. Through sacrifice and dedication, the Chandys taught their two boys the lessons of commitment and perseverance especially when it came to their education. Anil received his bachelor's degree from the University of St. Thomas making ends meet with a part time job in the school library. Recognized by his Dean of Finance at the time, Dr. Barry Wilbratte for his stellar academic performance with the highest GPA of all finance majors with a 3.9, Anil was awarded the FEI Scholarship during his junior year helping relieve some of the stresses of everyday expenses that were beyond tuition such as dorm fees and books.

Feeling privileged to have worked for Moody immediately after receiving his MBA from Texas A&M, he matriculated to HSBC, JP Morgan, and now proudly serves as Senior Vice President of Corporate and Institutional Banking at PNC. Anil Chandy has truly upheld his parents charge. There's no doubt, the sky is the limit for Anil, his family and his future.

Quotes:

"I never had access to high caliber industry executives. FEI afforded me this opportunity"

"I would join FEI because of the high-quality industry peers that make up FEI, it's a great source for support and knowledge"

"I had no financial mentor to seek guidance, education was my only avenue. Ongoing interaction with FEI members has been invaluable. "
